PROFESSIONAL CREDENTIALS

JOHN SCOTT

For over sixty years, John Scott has established himself as one of the finest composers working in films, having collaborated with foremost producers and directors worldwide, including Richard Donner, Mark Damon, Hugh Hudson, Norman Jewison, Irvin Kershner, Daniel Petrie, Roger Spottiswoode and Charlton Heston, among others. He continues to be an essential voice in international scoring.

Frequently associated with Hollywood's finest composers, including longtime friends—Jerry Goldsmith, Elmer Bernstein and John Williams—John Scott has created a body of work that stands up as some of the finest music ever written for film.

Patrick John Michael O'Hara Scott was born in Bishopston, Bristol, England. John's musical abilities are not without precedence—his father was a musician in the Bristol Police Band. And, like many children, John was given music lessons—first on the violin and later on the clarinet.

When John was fourteen, he enrolled in the British Army as a Boy Musician with the Woolwich Royal Artillery in order to continue his musical studies. He continued his study of the clarinet...and harp. John went on to study the saxophone, and became proficient enough that when he eventually left the military, he was able to find steady work touring with many of the top British bands of the era. Additional instruments included the vibraphone and flute, which subsequently afforded him international recognition as a Jazz flautist.

Upon his discharge from the army in 1952, John played vibes with the Norman Burns Quintet. In the late-50s, he worked with Vic Ash's Sextet, Kenny Baker, and co-led a group with Art Ellefson, as well as freelancing with many other groups. He led his own group for a while, and was featured with Woody Herman's Anglo-American Herd in 1959. Composing and arranging for Ted Heath, John became involved in studio, film and Television work.

As time went on, people began to notice that John Scott had a unique ability as an arranger of music. Hired by EMI, he began to arrange and conduct many of EMI's top artists. John worked with The Beatles and their producer George Martin, and went on to record with noted artists and groups, including Tom Jones, Cilla Black, Matt Monro, Gerry and The Pacemakers, Nirvana and

The Hollies (John contributed as arranger and conductor to their mega-hits “He Ain’t Heavy, He’s My Brother” and “Long Cool Woman [In a Black Dress],” among others). However, John was also a working, playing musician. He played with The Julian Bream Consort, Yehudi Menuhin, Ravi Shankar, Nelson Riddle, John Dankworth, John Barry, Cleo Laine and many others.

In Barry Miles’ “The Beatles Diary Volume 1: The Beatles Years,” it is noted that John holds the distinction of being the first musician to have been invited to be featured on their recordings, playing both alto and tenor flute on “You’ve Got to Hide Your Love Away.”

“For a six-pound fee (roughly $17 at the time) and no credit, Johnnie Scott recorded tenor and alto flute parts for the song. The Beatles gave Scott some general direction and let him sketch out the arrangement on his own. Scott did recall that the boys were in a fine mood at the time. ‘Ringo was full of marital joys,’ he said. ‘He’d just got back from his honeymoon.’”—Rolling Stone Magazine, September 19, 2011

In addition to working with others, in the Sixties, John was the leader of a popular Jazz quintet and the noted Johnny Scott Trio (playing flute at right with David Snell and Duncan Lamont). Melody Maker, the premier British Pop music paper of the 20th Century (1926-2000), issued an annual Jazz poll. Also in the Sixties, John ranked as the best flute player for six consecutive years, and among the top three for a ten-year period.

It was at this time that John started to play saxophone on film scores. He played principal sax for Henry Mancini—who was a teacher and mentor in John’s development as a film composer—on Pink Panther, Charade and Arabesque, and was principal sax on John Barry’s Goldfinger soundtrack, and played flute on The Lion in Winter. This exposure to film music whetted John’s appetite for composing music for films.

His first score was for the film A Study in Terror (James Hill, dir.). Since that ‘big break,’ John has gone on to score over seventy motion pictures over the years. His efforts have not gone unnoticed, for he is the recipient of four Emmy Awards and numerous industry recognitions of his work.

There is an industry recognition that John did not receive, for which he was originally nominated—the Academy Award for Best Song in a Motion Picture. In 1974, John wrote the music and Arthur Hamilton the lyrics for the song “Remembering” for England Made Me. Lana Cantrell performed the song. However, the song became disqualified due to Ms. Cantrell’s vocal being recorded over the motion picture title strip at the end of the feature. The Academy subsequently notified East Coast Records, and requested the instrumental version be nominated in its place. The label declined in support of Ms. Cantrell. As Chairman of the Music Branch’s Executive Committee, it was Mr. Hamilton’s responsibility to disqualify his own song. The rule was changed the following year, and the use of a song over the end titles became eligible—and common practice.

John has not limited his compositions to the silver screen; he has also composed many concert works, including three symphonies, three ballets, an opera, chamber ensembles and string quartets, among numerous others. He has also conducted other film composers’ work both for the screen and for release on CD, as well as having conducted most of the London orchestras, including the London Philharmonic Orchestra, the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra and the London Symphony Orchestra. Other European orchestras include the Prague Philharmonic, Munich Symphony Orchestra and the Slovak Radio Symphony Orchestra.

In May 2006, John conducted the inaugural concert of the Hollywood Symphony Orchestra at the magnificent Royce Hall on the campus of the University of California, Los Angeles. As founder, conductor and artistic director, it was a thrill of a lifetime. For the past 16 years, John has been possessed with an obsession for a deeper investigation into the heritage of film music. It is his goal to place the best of symphonic film music fairly and squarely alongside the accepted symphonic repertoire in major concert halls. He believes it is time that great composers of symphonic film music are given proper recognition.

As president of the Hollywood Symphony Orchestra Society, John was developing programs to establish activities involving interaction between schools, the orchestra and a variety of multimedia projects, to help students explore and understand the concept and value of music for film. The Society has held special competitions in the area of film music composition, and providing mentoring from masters of the art, with grant winners performing their work on stage, to film, with a full orchestra.

John has also founded his own record company, JOS Records, Beverly Hills, California. JOS is unusual in that it is a label that administered by a composer, and that it releases the composer's own music. This is not unprecedented in the history of musical recordings (e.g., Elmer Bernstein's Film Music Club, and some Stanyan recordings by Rod McKuen) but not on this type of scale and for this length of time. JOS Records has released thirty-five soundtrack CDs! Film music fans are thankful that these scores—several of them quite obscure—have been released at all.

On October 16, 2013, the British Academy of Songwriters, Composers and Authors (BASCA), in association with PRS for Music, honored John Scott with the prestigious Gold Badge Award, with a formal presentation at their 40th Award Ceremony. The Awards are presented annually to exceptional men and women from cross the music industry for their contribution to Britain's music industry.

John is a resident of London, England and Los Angeles, California.

The Annual Gold Badge Awards

HONOURING A UNIQUE CONTRIBUTION TO MUSIC

John Scott Honored For His Work

London, September 16, 2013—Each year, the British Academy of Songwriters, Composers and Authors (BASCA), in association with PRS for Music, celebrate the achievements of an outstanding group of men and women who have made a special contribution to Britain's music industry. The 40th Anniversary Gold Badge Awards will take place at a luncheon on Wednesday 16th October 2013 at The Savoy, London. The ceremony, hosted by Guy Fletcher OBE, is a presentation by BASCA in association with PRS for Music.

The Awards - Each year up to twelve recipients from all areas of the music industry are recognised for their work in support of British songwriters and composers. The awards are an opportunity for BASCA members to acknowledge and thank those who have contributed to their career.

Past recipients include performers, session musicians, producers and engineers, orchestrators, arrangers, publishers, managers and broadcasters. Some recipients may also be songwriters or composers in their own right, but all have supported the music writing community through aspects of their work.

Gold Badge Awards 2013 - The 40th Anniversary Gold Badge Award Recipients are:

Guy Barker	Stephen Navin	Johnnie Walker
Roger Dean	John Scott	Alison Wenham
Don Letts	Bonnie Tyler	James Wyllie
Jane Manning	Mike Vernon	Bill Wyman

John Scott is a musician, arranger and film composer. He played flute on The Beatles' "You've Got to Hide Your Love Away," arranged and conducted The Hollies' "He Ain't Heavy, He's My Brother," and performed and conducted Gerry and The Pacemakers' "Ferry Cross the Mersey," among many others. After playing principal saxophone on Henry Mancini's Pink Panther score, John began composing for film, and has since scored over seventy films. He is also the recipient of four Emmy Awards for his work in Television.

How it all started - As the Ivor Novello Awards were nearing their 20th year the legendary songwriter, Jimmy Kennedy, then Chairman of The Songwriters' Guild of Great Britain, decided a publicly recognised tribute to those who worked in support of songwriters was long overdue and so the Gold Badge Awards were born.

The first ceremony was held as part of the Music Publishers' Association lunch in London's Connaught Rooms on 12th September 1974. The first year included record producer Mickie Most, musical director Vilem Tausky and Vera Lynn.

What brings them together is that each recipient has made an outstanding contribution to Britain's music industry.

NOTEWORTHY

John Scott led two Jazz bands during the sixties: The Johnny Scott Quintet and The Johnny Scott Trio. The former consisted of himself on flute, Duncan Lamont (saxophone), David Snell (harp), Barry Morgan (drums) and Arthur Watts (bass); the latter, Scott, Lamont and Snell.

Melody Maker, the premier British Pop music paper of the 20th Century (1926-2000), issued an annual Jazz poll. In the Sixties, John ranked as the "Best Flute Player" for six consecutive years, and among the top three for a ten-year period.

In 1964, British architect Theo Crosby commissioned distinguished British photographer Roger Mayne, to prepare what was to become a pioneering, photographic installation entitled "The British at Leisure." Mayne was renowned for his pictures depicting London in the 1950s and 60s. The installation premiered at the Milan Triennale, and featured 310 color images projected on five screens to a commissioned Jazz score by noted Jazz composer and musician, John Scott. The Milan Triennale awarded both Mr. Mayne and Mr. Scott for this most significant work.

In the early sixties, Aberdeen, Scotland, was a hotbed for singers and groups performing live at The Capitol, The Palace and The Beach Ballroom. The Rolling Stones performed where the ticket price ranged from five to fifteen shilling, and the program cost a pound six shilling. People listened to big name bands such as Manfred Mann at The Palace, and The Beatles performing at The Beach Ballroom. Tickets for an event on January 5, 1963, cost three shilling, and billed as "The Johnny Scott Band Show, featuring The Beatles," as this was just before the group became famous.

In The Beatles Diary Volume 1: The Beatles Years, it notes that John Scott holds the distinction of being the first musician to have been invited to be featured on their recordings, playing both alto and tenor flute on "You've Got to Hide Your Love Away."

"You've Got To Hide Your Love Away" was the first Beatles song to feature an outside musician (apart from "Love Me Do", the group's first EMI recording, in which producer George Martin had engaged a session drummer to substitute for the then-untried Ringo Starr). The basic rhythm track was recorded first, followed by George Harrison's guitar and some extra percussion. John Scott recorded a tenor flute in the spaces in Lennon's vocal track and an additional alto flute part, in harmony with the first, on the last available track of the four-track machine."—Bob Spitz, The Beatles: The Biography

Perhaps the greatest compliment John Scott ever received for a score came from fellow composer Henry Mancini. Because of his reputation as a versatile studio musician, Mancini asked for John when he came to London to record Charade. From then on, they recorded a string of films. This was the genesis of John's desire to compose for film. He was able to take note of how Mancini fitted music to film, how he rehearsed his cues, how he utilized the studio and the engineers. Mancini was his teacher. And one day, the student received a call from his teacher. It was Mancini saying, “John, I’ve just seen Greystoke! You have written a wonderful score!”

In Die Hard, the final minutes were tracked with music from another Twentieth Century Fox feature. Originally a ‘temp track’, the studio ultimately decided to leave it in the picture. The poignant music heard when McClane and Powell see each other for the first time, is from John Scott’s original score for Man On Fire, entitled “We’ve Got Each Other.”

John Scott wrote the music and Arthur Hamilton the lyrics for “Remembering” for the motion picture England Made Me. The song was performed by Lana Cantrell, and was nominated for an Academy Award for Best Song in a Motion Picture. However, it became disqualified due to Ms. Cantrell’s vocal being recorded over the motion picture title strip at the end of the feature. The Academy subsequently notified East Coast Records, and requested the instrumental version be nominated in its place. East Coast Records declined in support of Ms. Cantrell. As chairman of the Music Branch’s Executive Committee, it was Mr. Hamilton’s responsibility to disqualify his own song. The rule was changed the following year, and the use of a song over the end titles became eligible—and common practice.

Released over 35 years ago, The Final Countdown was directed by Don Taylor (Damien: Omen 2, Escape from the Planet of the Apes). The film's plot concerns the USS Nimitz, an American, nuclear aircraft carrier caught in a classic dilemma when a supernatural storm sends the ship and its crew back in time just before the Japanese assault on Pearl Harbor.

Virtually unknown outside Naval Ranks, there is something known as “breakaway music.” Breakaway music is a modern U.S. Naval tradition used to motivate sailors upon the conclusion of underway replenishment (UNREP). When the two ships involved in the UNREP conclude their transfer of fuels and stores, and commence their breakaway, a song (usually selected by the Captain, but sometimes chosen by the Officer of the Deck or Navigation Officer) is played over the IMC, the “all hands” circuit that talks to the entire ship.

Breakaway music may sometimes be related to the name of the ship, such as the “Theme from Star Trek” (USS Enterprise), “Theme from Rocky” (USS Boxer) and “Bad Company” (USS Forrestal). The present-day breakaway music for the USS Nimitz upon completion of UNREP? It can only be the music uniquely written for the ship—John Scott’s “Theme from The Final Countdown.”

In June 1993, Indian film composer Ilaiyaraaja, widely rated as one of the greatest composers of Indian film music, premiered his western classical Symphonic Work in five movements with the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra, London. The symphony was written in less than a month. His friend, noted Hollywood film composer and conductor, John Scott, conducted the work. Ilaiyaraaja was the first Asian to have his work performed with the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra.

In 2003, John Scott unveiled his new orchestral score for the 1920 silent classic Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, starring John Barrymore, conducting the 40-piece Hollywood Symphony Orchestra at the Haugh Performing Arts Auditorium, Citrus College, Glendora, California. The orchestra performed in synchronization to the original film.

In 2007, John Scott premiered an original score to the 1922 silent film Robin Hood, written by and starring Douglas Fairbanks. The work was performed by the Nottingham Philharmonic Orchestra, Nottingham, England, and was performed in synchronization to the original film. A subsequent performance occurred in 2012 at London's Cadogan Hall, with the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra.

On October 16, 2013, John Scott was honored with The Gold Badge Award presented by the British Academy of Songwriters, Composers and Authors (BASCA), in association with PRS for Music. On this 40th Anniversary of the Award, the group celebrated the achievements of twelve men and women who have made a special contribution to Britain's music industry.

In 1957, John Scott was a musician performing under the direction of Malcolm Arnold, and recording his score for Bridge on the River Kwai. The musicians had finished the morning session, and the orchestra broke for lunch. John was prevented from leaving by Eric Boyd-Perkins, who had been the film editor on John's score for Antony and Cleopatra, and was now the sound editor on Bridge on the River Kwai. He had been having trouble recording a group of people he had rounded up to do some whistling. He asked if John had a piccolo, and would he mind lending a hand? John told him it would be a pleasure, and remained, while Eric ran the footage in the film where men are marching and whistling the famous “Colonel Bogey March.” Malcolm had composed a theme, which was a counter melody to “Colonel Bogey,” and the collective whistlers present needed something to follow. John obliged by leading them, and keeping them in time with his piccolo playing. And, that is how the famous “whistling main title” was produced, and that is how John came to miss his lunch that day. They carried on recording the score for the film after the lunch break.
